EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

INTRODUCTION

1. The Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) came into existence on 28 May, 1975. It comprises sixteen sovereign West African States namely Benin, Burkina Faso, Cape Verde, Côte d'Ivoire, The Gambia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea Bissau, Liberia, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Sierra Leone and Togo. The Community has an estimated total population of 184 million inhabitants and covers a surface area of approximately 6,142,000 square kilometres.

OBJECTIVES OF ECOWAS

2. ECOWAS was created to accelerate the integration of the national economies of its Member States. In more specific terms, Article 2 of the ECOWAS Treaty states the aims of the Community as follows:

"to promote cooperation and development in all fields of economic activity particularly in the fields of industry, transport, telecommunications, energy, agriculture, natural resources, commerce, monetary and financial questions and in social and cultural matters for the purpose of raising the standard of living of its peoples, of increasing and maintaining economic stability, of fostering closer relations among its members and contributing to the progress and development of the African continent'.

3. Article 2 of the Treaty also provides the modalities of achieving these objectives. It provides that the Community shall by stages ensure:

- (a) "the elimination as between States of customs duties and other charges of equivalent effect in respect of the importation and exportation of goods;
- (b) the abolition of quantitative and administrative restrictions on trade among Member States;
- (c) the establishment of a common customs tariff and a common commercial policy towards third countries;
- (d) the abolition as between Member States of the obstacles to the free movement of persons, services and capital;
- (e) the harmonisation of the agricultural policies and the promotion of common projects in Member States notably in the fields of marketing, research and agro-industrial enterprises;

(f) the implementation of schemes for the joint development of transport, communication, energy and other infrastructural facilities as well as the evolution of a common policy in these fields;

(g) the harmonisation of the economic and industrial policies of the Member States and the elimination of disparities in the level of development of Member States;

(h) the harmonisation, required for the proper functioning of the Community, of the monetary policies of the Member States;

(i) the establishment of a Fund for Cooperation, Compensation and Development; and

(j) such other activities calculated to further the aims of the Community as the Member States may from time to time undertake in common'.

4. In consonance with these aims, the Community had adopted common development policies in all areas of socio-economic activities, as well as in the areas of regional peace, security and defence matters.

ECOWAS ECONOMIC COOPERATION AND INTEGRATION PROGRAMMES

5. ECOWAS has undertaken cooperation and integration programmes in all socio-economic activities. The highlights of some of these Community programmes are as follows:

CUSTOMS AND TRADE COOPERATION PROGRAMMES

6. One of the objectives of the ECOWAS Treaty is the establishment of a customs union. This involves the free circulation of goods originating from the Member States and a common tariff for goods imported from third countries. The Community has also adopted common customs and statistical documents, created a Community Computer Centre and assisted with the installation of an automatic data processing system (ASYCUDA) in Member States to support its trade liberalisation programme.
7. In order to further promote the integration of the national economies and the growth of trade between Member States, the Authority of Heads of State and Government adopted, in 1984, the Protocol on Community Enterprises. The Protocol provides avenues for joint endeavours under a Community framework.

COOPERATION IN THE AREA OF MONEY AND PAYMENTS

8. The decision-making organs of the Community agreed to create a single monetary zone by the year 2000 in addition to removing obstacles that hinder easier and freer monetary and financial transactions between Member States.

FREE MOVEMENT OF PERSONS, RIGHT OF RESIDENCE AND ESTABLISHMENT

9. The ECOWAS Treaty objectives of economic integration and the improvement of the standard of living cannot be achieved save where there is absolute freedom of movement in Member States of all citizens of the Community.
10. Consequently, the authorities of the Community adopted in 1979, the Protocol on Free Movement of Persons, the Right of Residence and Establishment which gives ECOWAS citizens the right to enter, reside and establish themselves in the territory of any Member State. This was implemented in three stages of five-year intervals as follows:

Phase one: right of entry with the abolition of visas and permits upon presentation of a valid travel document for a stay lasting up to ninety (90) days.

Phase two: right of residence. During this stage, each Member State grants Community citizens from other Member States the right to reside in its territory for the purpose of seeking and engaging in paid employment. Specific provisions were made to cover cross-border workers and protection against arbitrary expulsion of groups or individual migrant workers. Cooperation has been established between the appropriate national administrations of Member States concerning the movement of persons within the Community, especially migrant labour.

Phase three: right of establishment. This final stage envisaged under the Protocol on Free Movement began in 1990. Member States extend the right of establishment to all Community citizens. The necessary provisions have been adopted to regulate the establishment of these citizens in Member States. Such Community citizens can have all the rights and privileges enjoyed by nationals of the host country, including the acquisition of property and the establishment of enterprises.

An ECOWAS travel certificate has also been adopted for the use of Community citizens.

AGRICULTURAL COOPERATION

11. In the field of agriculture the ECOWAS agricultural development strategy adopted by the decision-making organs of the Community covers the improvement of rural infrastructure and social well-being, crop, livestock and fishery production, forestry and wild-life; food preservation and storage, and food security; processing and commercialisation of agricultural products; development of agricultural research; training; re-afforestation and the environment. The ECOWAS Authority of Heads of State and Government has mandated the Executive Secretariat and the ECOWAS Fund to take all necessary steps to ensure the attainment of regional food self-sufficiency by the year 2000. Seven seed multiplication centres and eight cattle-breeding centres have already been identified in a study conducted on ways and means of combating famine and ensuring food self-sufficiency.
12. The ECOWAS Authority of Heads of State and Government took a decision in May 1982 requesting Member States to harmonise their positions and adopt a common front during negotiations on the sale of their agricultural export commodities with third countries. This policy aims at ensuring that Member States obtain the best price for their agricultural products.
13. An ECOWAS rural water programme has been adopted for the construction of 200 water points in each Member State for the use of the rural population. ECOWAS has also initiated and put into operation a policy for the control of desertification.

INDUSTRIAL COOPERATION

14. One particular benefit that each individual West African country is to derive from economic integration is an enlarged market which would make the existing industrial enterprises more viable. For this, an integrated industrial development programme would be formulated and adopted by the Community. This programme would be based principally on the utilisation of the existing resources of the region and will cover food and wood processing, the development of agricultural machinery, pharmaceutical and petro-chemical products.
15. Apart from the Protocol on Community Enterprises whose aims include the promotion of industrial development, Member States have undertaken to communicate to each other major feasibility studies and reports on projects located in their respective territories. Among other things, this exchange is to enable the Community harmonise industrial policies in the region.

COOPERATION IN THE FIELD OF TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

16. In the field of transport, ECOWAS has sponsored technical feasibility studies and extended loans to some of its Member States to enable them construct vital segments of the Trans-West African Highway. Well before the year 2000, the Community should have completed the two axes, namely, the trans-coastal highway (Lagos-Nouakchott) and the trans-Sahelian (Dakar-N'djamena). Some inter-connecting roads have also been identified and are now under construction.
17. Certain protocols have been signed by ECOWAS Member States to facilitate the transit of goods and vehicles moving across borders. The provisions of the protocols involve the harmonisation of road legislations such as road signs, traffic rules, equipment, driving licence and vehicle documents. A road insurance card, code-named ECOWAS Brown Card, has been adopted and entered into force in January 1985.
18. ECOWAS is working with the Vienna Institute for Development on a West African railway network which would link the land-locked countries (Burkina Faso, Mali and Niger) to coastal countries such as Togo and Côte d'Ivoire. In due course, other countries in the region would also be linked to the railway network. Feasibility studies on the project are being carried out. The transport programme also includes the improvement of port facilities established for land-locked countries.
19. ECOWAS has undertaken studies on the improvement of the existing air transport system in West Africa. This initiative led to meetings of airlines of the region to explore various ways of cooperating among themselves. A similar study on coastal shipping confirmed the viability of a coastal service that would link countries of West and Central Africa. Private sector operators have manifested a keen interest in undertaking such a project.
20. The regional telecommunications programme for promoting direct links (telephone, telex and fax) between ECOWAS Member States has reached an advanced stage. Several Member States have already been linked together by a regional microwave system. ECOWAS has also established a Special Telecommunications Fund which extends loans to Member States for the improvement and development of their telecommunications systems. The Special Fund is also used for training and for the purchase of spare parts needed for the maintenance of the telecommunication facilities.
21. In order to facilitate telephone communications between Member States, a unit rate of (8) eight Gold Francs has been agreed upon as a base for bilateral negotiations of preferential tariffs. Another component of the communications programme relates to the development of an efficient postal system within the region. This project includes the adoption of a tariff system and a harmonised postal routing plan between Member States. It is also envisaged that several regional sorting centres would be established in selected Member States.

COOPERATION IN THE FIELD OF ENERGY

22. For more than a decade, problems in the energy sector have seriously affected the economic performance of ECOWAS Member States. The Energy Cooperation Programme adopted by ECOWAS aims at finding short and long-term solutions to these energy problems. The programme includes the identification of projects, the adoption of energy conservation measures, and a search for alternative sources of energy. In order to promote the judicious use of existing resources, a programme has been adopted for energy and its conservation in electricity-generating plants. The ECOWAS energy programme also covers the use of improved stoves and other energy sources as alternatives to fuel-wood.
23. An important component of the energy programme relates to the rationalisation of the utilisation of the existing oil refineries. Under the energy programme, it is also envisaged that various measures would be undertaken to develop a regional potential in new and renewable sources of energy, including solar energy, wind energy and bio-mass. The Community will also promote the development of the hydro-electric potential of the region through the construction of both small and large dams. Finally, the inter-connection of national electric grids is envisaged.

THE FUND FOR COOPERATION, COMPENSATION AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE ECONOMIC COMMUNITY OF WEST AFRICAN STATES.

24. In conformity with the aims of the ECOWAS Treaty, the ECOWAS Fund for Cooperation, Compensation and Development was established in 1978 and has its headquarters in Lomé, the Togolese Republic.
25. The purposes of the Fund as stipulated in Article 2 of the Protocol relating to the Fund are as follows:
 - (a) "provide compensation and other forms of assistance to Member States which have suffered losses as a result of the application of the provisions of this Treaty;

- (b) provide compensation to Member States which have suffered losses as a result of the location of Community enterprises;
- (c) provide grants for financing national or Community research and development activities;
- (d) grant loans for feasibility studies and development projects in Member States;
- (d) guarantee foreign investments made in Member States in respect of enterprises established in pursuance of the provisions of the Treaty on the harmonization of industrial policies;
- (f) provide means to facilitate the sustained mobilization of internal and external financial resources for Member States and the Community; and
- (g) promote development projects in the less developed Member States of the Community."

POLITICAL COOPERATION, REGIONAL PEACE AND STABILITY

26. Although the 1975 ECOWAS Treaty provides essentially for economic cooperation and is completely silent on political cooperation, the Community decision-making bodies have not lost sight of the fact that economic development, political cooperation, peace and stability are inextricably linked. There can be no economic development without peace and stability. To fill this lacunae in the ECOWAS Treaty, the Community adopted the Protocol on Non-Aggression and the Protocol on Mutual Assistance in Defence Matters, in 1978 and 1981 respectively.
27. These two Protocols are the primary instruments for the maintenance of regional peace, stability and security. While the Protocol on Non-Aggression mandates Member States to respect each other's territorial integrity and to settle their disputes by peaceful means, the Protocol on Mutual Assistance in Defence sees any armed threat or aggression against a Member State as a threat or aggression against the whole Community.
28. These two Protocols remained largely unimplemented until 1990 when, in the wake of the Liberian crisis, the Authority took note of the increasing incidence of inter-State disputes within the region and established an ECOWAS Standing Mediation Committee to look into disputes and conflicts among Member States, particularly the Liberian crisis.

29. The Liberian crisis brought to test the role of the Community in not only maintaining peace and security within the region, but in taking decisive action to bring to an end the wanton destruction of life and property in a sister country.
30. There was total anarchy in Liberia in 1990. The warring factions failed to cease hostilities and continued with massive destruction of property and the massacre of hundreds of thousands of innocent people, Liberians and foreigners alike. There was a government in Liberia that could not govern and there was total breakdown of law and order. The economy of the entire country had collapsed and there was fear of the conflict spreading to neighbouring countries and the entire region.
31. The provisions of the two Protocols mentioned above and Article 52 of the UN Charter empowered the Community to take decisive action to end the conflict in Liberia. It adopted a Peace Plan for Liberia which provides as follows:
- (a) called on the warring factions to observe an immediate ceasefire;
 - (b) agreed to send an ECOWAS Ceasefire Monitoring Group (ECOMOG) to monitor the ceasefire, restore law and order and create the necessary conditions for free and fair elections;
 - (c) called for a National Conference of Liberian warring factions, political parties and other interest groups to establish a broad-based interim government acceptable to the people of Liberia;
 - (e) General and Presidential elections to be held within 12 months; and
 - (f) ECOWAS and other international bodies to observe the elections in order to ensure that they are free and fair.
32. This ECOWAS Peace Plan is currently being implemented.
33. The ECOWAS Ceasefire Monitoring Group (ECOMOG) made up of army, airforce and naval personnel, contributed on a voluntary basis by some Member States has been in Liberia since August 1990.
34. ECOMOG had, between November 1990 and October 1992 established buffer zones between the warring parties, made Monrovia and its environs safe and habitable, facilitated the movement of humanitarian relief supplies, reactivate essential services, evacuated tens of thousands of Liberians and foreigners trapped during the war, repatriated Liberians back to Monrovia, chaired meetings between the warring parties for the negotiation of a ceasefire agreement, and monitored and verified the implementation of the ceasefire.

35. The role of ECOMOG however, changed when the NPFL headed by Charles Taylor launched its second major aggression against Monrovia and ECOMOG positions, from that of peace keeping to peace enforcement.
36. An Interim Government of National Unity which is acceptable to Liberians was established by the All-Liberian National Conference convened in Banjul in September/October 1990. It was re-elected in March 1991 by a similar conference in Monrovia.
37. The war in Liberia through the decisive action of ECOWAS, would have since ended but for the continued intransigence of Mr Charles Taylor and his National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) who are bent on getting power by force of arms.
38. The major preoccupation of the Community as at now is to convince Charles Taylor that military victory as a vehicle to political power in Liberia is impossible of attainment and that the only acceptable procedure is by way of fair and free elections.
39. The ECOWAS peace initiatives have been applauded by the international community and in particular by the OAU and the UN. The Liberian crisis in the words of the United Nations Secretary-General, "represents a good example of a systematic cooperation between the United Nations and a regional organisation as envisaged in Chapter VIII of the Charter I believe that it would be the wish of the Council to continue and expand, as appropriate, this cooperative relationship between the United Nations and the concerned regional body".
40. The Liberian crisis has alerted the Community to the need to consolidate the mutual relations between Member States by establishing and strengthening appropriate mechanisms for the timely prevention and resolution of intra-State and inter-State conflicts. The Community believes that it cannot achieve this in isolation without the help of and interaction with the international community. It is for this and other reasons that the Community seeks the status of observer with the UN.

working relations with the traditional development partners of West Africa. Close working relations have been developed with the United Nations family, namely the ECA, UNDP, UNCTAD, ITC, FAO, UNIDO, UNESCO, UNEP, WHO, ITU, the Security Council and the UN Secretariat.

42. It also has a close working relationship with financial institutions such as the World Bank, IMF, ADB, BADEA, IDB, OPEC FUND, KUWAITI FUND, and other institutions like the EEC, OECD, USAID, CIDA, IDRC, Ford Foundation, Friedrich Naumann Foundation, etc.
43. ECOWAS is regularly invited to attend in an observer capacity meetings of some of these institutions, especially ECA, ADB, OAU, World Bank and IMF.
44. The Community leaders believe therefore that the granting of an observer status to ECOWAS and the attendance by ECOWAS officials at the United Nations General Assembly Sessions would enhance the working relations with the UN and its specialised agencies and also provide direct access to documents and information made available at such meetings. Such a status granted to ECOWAS would also act as a catalyst in developing even closer ties with the rest of the international Community.
45. ECOWAS could also be used as a forum for introducing or implementing United Nations policies and decisions. For example, the UNDP had used ECOWAS as a coordinating body for regional assistance extended to West African countries. If the United Nations/ECOWAS relations were formalised through the granting of observer status, countries in West Africa would come to accept more readily such regional approach.
46. Similarly, the UN can act through ECOWAS to encourage West African countries to adopt common approaches to issues discussed within the UN and thus facilitate its decision-making process.

COOPERATION WITH DEVELOPMENT PARTNERS OF WEST AFRICAN COUNTRIES

41. The various Community programmes enumerated above have brought about the development of

DONE AT COTONOU, THIS 20TH DAY
OF JULY, 1993

Honourable Paul DOSSOU
CHAIRMAN
FOR COUNCIL

ECOWAS METEOROLOGICAL PROGRAMME

1. INTRODUCTION

- 1.1 After analyzing the current status of the National Meteorological Services of the ECOWAS Member States, their activities, and those of the existing institutions in the various countries and sub-region (AGRHYMET, CIEH, OCLALAV, ASECNA, ACMAD) and training centres in Lagos, Niamey—EAMAC—, Dakar, the mission prepared this ECOWAS meteorological programme.
- 1.2 This programme takes into account the basic infrastructure, telecommunication means and information exchange, applications, transfer of technology, training and applied research.
- 1.3 Proposals for the co-ordination system to be set up between the Meteorological Services, as well as between them and the existing institutions, and for the monitoring and implementation structures to be set up are also covered in this programme.

2. PROGRAMME COMPONENTS

2.1 Regional observing system

2.1.1 The surface-based observing network (synoptic, agrometeorological, climatological and rainfall stations) still has many shortcomings (part-time operation, incomplete equipment and understaffing). Phenological observations are still not yet generally practised, network of pollution stations is not in existence, and the upper-air network is very limited and only partially operational.

2.2.2 Many countries in the region have considerable problems in collecting data nationally because of difficulties in transmitting using SSB equipment linked either to generators or to antenna systems as well as the lack of spare parts and competent technicians. These problems still affect services in Guinea, Liberia, Mali, Nigeria and Sierra Leone.

2.1.3 It is essential to set up a regional basic network which is sufficiently dense and functional to permit an understanding of the weather and climate and of the serious consequences of their variability and variation on socio-economic activities.

2.1.4 Absolute priority must be given to:

- Strengthening and/or renovating the existing surface or upper-air stations on the regional basis synoptic network in Ghana, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Nigeria and Sierra Leone;
- Improving and updating the national observing systems, national collection systems and maintenance installations in Gambia, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Mali, Mauritania, Nigeria, Senegal and Côte d'Ivoire;
- Taking advantage of new possibilities obtained thanks to technological advancements in the observing field (satellites, radar, automatic stations, etc.).

2.2 TELECOMMUNICATIONS

2.2.1 The lack of reliable meteorological telecommunication circuits between NMCs and their associated RTHs or other RTHs still persists in Gambia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea — Bissau, Liberia, Nigeria (Lagos — Kano) and Sierra Leone.

2.2.2. Low-speed (50-75 bauds) regional circuits, and the use of the AFTN circuits or HF circuits jeopardize the regular collecting of data and products in NMCs.

2.2.3 It should also be noted that the insufficient transmitting power of the RTT broadcasts from Dakar or the non-implementation of RTT broadcasting services by RTGs Kano and Niamey; below transmitting power of the facsimile broadcasts from Dakar; and the lack of automation of RTH Kano have serious repercussions on the regular availability of data and products needed by the NMVs.

2.2.4 Moreover, the RSMC Dakar prepares its products with conventional manual methods. The Lagos Centre has not yet been set up.

2.2.5 In view of the above there is a need:

- To establish or renovate the necessary regional telecommunication circuits between the NMCs in Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and their respective RTHs;
- To upgrade the regional meteorological telecommunication circuits and improve the performance of RTHs to enable them to supply NMCs with the required products;
- To improve the capacity and operation of RSMCs Dakar and Lagos to enable them to process, interpret, adapt and supply numerical weather forecasts received from the NMCs to the RTHs;
- To use the possibilities of new technology in the field of telecommunications (DCPs, DRSs and MDD) and replace the electrical power supply or generators by solar panels in some cases;
- For ECOWAS, which has set up 95% of the surface telecommunications in the region, to assist the Meteorological Services and PTT administrations in the region to find ways of making best use of the PTT services. The telecommunication network linking the region's countries is insufficiently used, particularly because of the high cost of communications.

2.3 Calibration and Maintenance Facilities

2.3.1 There are difficulties in maintaining the surface observing station network (synoptic, agrometeorological, climatological and rainfall stations) as well as upper-air stations to ensure proper functioning, because of the insufficient staff, spare parts or instruments, the absence of regular network inspection and insufficient instrument maintenance. The same applies to the telecommunication equipment (lack of qualified technicians and of spare parts, worn out or obsolete electrical generators, etc.). This penalizes functioning of the observing network and hence the quality and quantity of meteorological observations and products.

2.3.2 Whilst most meteorological services in the region have a calibration and maintenance workshop, some still do not have the facilities for repairing, calibrating and maintaining meteorological equipment even of the conventional type. In most cases, sophisticated meteorological instruments or equipment are calibrated or repaired outside the region or by services other than the Meteorological Services.

2.3.3 Considering the problems mentioned under 2.3.1 and 2.3.2 above, and in order to attain self-sufficiency at regional level and ensure transfer of technology between the meteorological services of the ECOWAS Member States, it is recommended that one or two regional workshop centres be established for the calibration and maintenance of meteorological equipment and installations. The workshops could also be set up by strengthening or improving those already existing in the region.

2.4 Training

2.4.1 The region has several training centres:

- The "Ecole Africaine de Météorologie et de l'aviation civile" (EAMAC) in Niamey which covers the Member States of ASECNA, 8 of which belong to ECOWAS. Training in this school is oriented towards activities for aviation (aeronautical meteorology, maintenance, etc.) for class II and III personnel;
- The AGRHYMET Centre which covers 9 member states of CILSS, 8 of which belong to ECOWAS. Training in this centre essentially covers agrometeorological and hydrological activities. The centre is situated in Niamey and trains class II and III personnel in the fields mentioned;
- The Regional Meteorological Training Centre (RMTTC) in Oshodi, Nigeria, which trains Class I, II, III and IV personnels;
- The "Ecole Régionale de la Navigation Aérienne et de Météorologie (ERNAM) in Dakar which belongs to the ASECNA Member States and trains Class IV meteorologists.

2.4.2 Despite progress achieved by some of these centres by improving their training facilities, many meteorological and hydrological staff are still trained outside the region because some disciplines are not yet covered by these training centres. For example, there are a few specialized courses on the maintenance of electronic equipment and meteorological instruments. Moreover, training is not provided to all categories of staff.

2.4.3 The main problems encountered by these centres are the following:

- insufficient funding;
- lack of sufficient and qualified instructors;
- small premises;
- insufficient or obsolete teaching equipment and material;
- disciplines not provided for all the curricula, irregular courses, etc.

2.4.4. The countries in the region have universities which teach scientific disciplines concerning meteorology (Universities of Abidjan, Dakar, Lagos, Niamey, etc). The staff and facilities at these universities could be used for training Class I meteorologists, taking advantage of the facilities of other existing establishments in the region.

2.4.5 For the reasons given in paragraphs 4.1, 4.2 and 4.3, in order to strengthen training in the region, the Meteorological Services of the ECOWAS Member States should create or strengthen one or two training centres to meet the requirements of the region's Members and enable them to take an active part in current activities related to climate change, depletion of the ozone layer and the environment, this in co-operation with ECOWAS and existing training centres and universities in the region. The regional centre(s) should try, with the support of ECOWAS and of the Member countries, to seek technical and financial assistance within or outside the region.

2.4.6 The region should encourage its members to offer training courses and seminars, provide financial support to their students on these courses and supply lecturers or instructors.

2.5 Meteorological Applications

2.5.1 The region's countries, like most African countries, have geared their economic and social development policy, in particular towards some priority sectors such as rural development, water resources, energy, transport, environment and public works.

Rural Development

2.5.2 This sector is the driving force for economic growth, involving more than 80% of the total population still living in rural areas. Meteorological applications (agrometeorology, climatology, etc.) contribute towards crop monitoring and permit better planning of farming activities during the crop season. Applications of meteorological information also helps in inventory and assessment of available natural pastureland, thus assisting herdsmen in moving their herds to avoid overgrazing.

Water and Energy Resource Management

2.5.3 Climatological information enables the countries' water and energy resources (hydroelectricity, solar and wind energy, etc.) to be better managed.

Transport

2.5.4 Knowledge of meteorological phenomena, weather forecasts and warnings ensure the safety and regular service of air traffic as well as land, sea and river transport.

2.5.5 Public works

Meteorological data on elements such as sunshine, rainfall, wind, humidity, temperature, etc. influence activities related to road construction, port installations and public works in general. An analysis of meteorological information makes the work more feasible and permits savings in this sector.

2.6 Research and Development

2.6.1 The ECOWAS Member countries should try to strengthen their meteorological research activities by creating research units, training researchers and encouraging them, and forming meteorological databanks.

2.6.2 ECOWAS should try to set up a mechanism for exchanges between members of scientific information, research programmes, and research results on meteorology and/or associated fields. The Meteorological Services should foster co-operation amongst themselves and with other institutions (universities, research institutes and professional associations) at national, sub-regional and regional levels. The Meteorological Services in the region should exchange researchers.

2.6.3 In addition to the coordination of research and development activities, ECOWAS should consider the establishment of a regional monitoring centre to look into the specific/particular weather and climate systems that affect the economic and social activities of the region.

Alternatively a suitable existing national or regional centre could be designated and strengthened to carry out the function.

2.7 Environment

2.7.1 The successive droughts which have serious repercussions on the economies of African countries, as well as, over the last years, problems related to climate change, greenhouse gases, depletion of the ozone layer, desertification, and natural disasters such as floods and tropical cyclones have involved and drawn more attention to meteorological activities both at national and international level. The Meteorological Services help to improve global environmental management and monitor meteorological and climatic parameters (World Climate Programme, IPCC, etc.).

2.7.2 In view of the danger threatening our planet's environment, the Meteorological Services should strengthen their observing networks in the upper air, as well as on the land and sea surfaces, and promote activities on monitoring, research and assessment regarding climate change and its impacts. Since they have been entrusted with providing information and authoritative scientific opinions on the state and behaviour of the atmosphere and climate and factors acting on them, national Meteorological Services should take part in all relevant aspects of the decision making process relating to the environment.

2.7.3 In the region, it is necessary to co-ordinate and strengthen the establishment of new atmosphere monitoring stations, and develop programmes for public information of meteorology in schools, colleges and the general public (brochures, guided visits, conference-debates, study groups, and joint efforts with NGOs involved in this field.

2.7.4 To enable the region's countries to cover the differential costs related to the necessary measurements relating to climate change and sea-level rise, without compromising their development, they should establish a joint position in negotiations on the framework convention between the parties concerned and ensure that additional, sufficient financial resources are made available to them to acquire the best, ecologically viable and durable techniques, on the most favourable terms.

2.7.5 The national and regional activities in the above sectors of the environment should be strengthened, harmonized and co-ordinated by ECOWAS in a manner that will make them contribute effectively towards the realization of the planned regional programmes and projects of the relevant ECOWAS technical commission (Commission for Transport, Telecommunications and Energy, and the Commission for Industry, Agriculture and Natural Resources). The regional coordination and harmonization strategies could include:

- exchange between ECOWAS Member countries of qualified officers and specialists;
- admission of ECOWAS meteorologists in existing training centres; exchange of information, experience and research results.

2.8. Development and commercialization of meteorological equipment and instruments in the region

2.8.1 The region's meteorological services represent a large market for purchases of meteorological equipment and instruments, consumables and spare parts (see the current network density, and consumable requirements for upper-air measurements, to mention only these). Some countries now have domestic industries capable of developing or manufacturing meteorological equipment or instruments. These new industrial activities in the meteorological field are viable and can be cheap, thus ensuring considerable savings for meteorological administrations.

2.8.2 ECOWAS could, through its Technical Commission for Industry and certain meteorologists from the region, make a study and in-depth assessment of the existing possibilities in ECOWAS Member countries to strengthen and improve the existing industries with the capacity for developing and commercializing meteorological equipment and instruments in order to satisfy progressively the considerable market within the Community.

3. MODALITIES OF IMPLEMENTATION OF THE PROGRAMME

In order to implement the components of the ECOWAS Meteorological Programme, there is a need to define and establish a coordination mechanism, a collaboration system with institutions concerned, a monitoring and an evaluation system; there is also a need to identify and mobilize internal and external resources for the implementation of the programme. The proposed programme which will include project execution in the Member States is conceived as a regional programme to be coordinated, monitored and evaluated by ECOWAS Secretariat in collaboration with the WMO.

3.1 Co-ordination System

3.1.1 The ECOWAS Technical Commission of Industry, Agriculture and Natural Resources will submit a recommendation to the Council of Ministers for the approval of a common meteorology programme.

3.1.2 A Committee of Directors of Meteorological Services of ECOWAS Member States, will be established. The Committee will meet once a year in one of the Member States. Its reports will be reviewed by the statutory bodies of ECOWAS in the usual manner. The relevant statutory texts will be formulated in due course.

3.2 Collaboration and co-ordination with concerned institutions

3.2.1 Regional and international specialized institutions and inter-governmental institutions are now implementing meteorological programmes in ECOWAS countries. These are in particular: ASECNA, CILSS, ACMAD, ICAO and WMO. Co-ordination meetings between these IGOs and ECOWAS will be necessary to harmonize these programmes which are necessarily complementary. The Chairman of the Committee of Directors as well as the representatives of these IGOs and donors will meet every year at the initiative of ECOWAS.

3.3 Monitoring and Implementation of Mechanisms

(a) Monitoring and Evaluation

3.3.1 In order to allow the Executive Secretariat to ensure the coordination, monitoring and evaluation of the programmes, it is proposed to strengthen the capabilities of the Directorate of Industry, Agriculture and Natural Resources by the recruitment of the regional co-ordinator for meteorological activities in ECOWAS. In close collaboration with the Directors of Meteorological Services, this expert will carry out the following duties:

- formulate priority projects during the initial phase,
- follow-up of preparation of tenders in collaboration with the Member States and the donors,
- preparation of training programmes,
- preparation of evaluation reports for statutory bodies of ECOWAS;

- co-ordination of meteorological activities relevant to ECOWAS development programmes

3.3.2 During the initial phase, consultants could carry out the above functions, if necessary.

(b) Implementation Mechanisms

3.3. On the basis of the decisions of the co-ordination meeting, the regional co-ordinator will ensure adequate exchange of information between the meteorological services on the one hand, and between these services and inter-governmental organizations concerned on the other hand. This consultation will concern essentially the short and medium term development plans, research programmes, on-the-job training, seminars, and formal training events.

3.3.4 It may be necessary to establish a periodic information system (monthly or quarterly newsletter). The regional co-ordinator should be able to travel as required. A plan of action will be established after adoption of the programme

4. FINANCIAL RESOURCES

4.1 The financial resources required for the implementation of the programme during the first phase will come from internal resources of national meteorological services and of regional institutions, of resources from donors for national or regional programmes and from the ECOWAS regular budget. A precise identification of the requirements of all the components of the programme should be carried out. The Secretariat of ECOWAS, in collaboration with WMO, will convene in due course a meeting of donors.
